Нопокона, Мау 27ти, 1907.

So far as can be judged by recent reports the question of the freatment of Asiatics in the British Colonies seems as far from a solution as ever. Vague hopes were entertained that some solution of the difficulty would be found through discussions. at the Colonial Conference; but the nature of the subject is such that it seems impossible for any general understanding, which will be satisfactory and will prove of a workable nature, being arrived at. The difficulty is accentuated very much by the fact that the Colonies are not disposed to recognise any distinction between Asiatics who happen to be British subjects and those who are not. In one point of view this is of course justifiable. It is not the political nationality that Colonists object to, but the individuals themselves. An Indian or a Chinaman is disliked not because he belongs to India or to Chine, but because he belongs to a race who have different habits to Europeans and whose fact that the habits of life of most Asiatics are not such as commend themselves to the average white man. We may ignore the fact as we like, but fact it still remains that an Asiatic element of any magnitude in a trouble to the Authorities and of no little I view of the subject to that entertained in TELEGRAMS. annoyance upon moral and often insanitary grounds to the community. In such circumstances can we reasonably maintain that the Colonies are not justified in putting restrictions upon the advent of persons whom they consider likely to be a trouble to them and detrimental to their material; interests: Upon purely economical grounds the best informed persons will no doubt be of opinion that the Colonies are mistaken in their views—as cheap labour is probably the most important asset which any community and especially a new community can possess. But it is not likely that the working classes with whom the Asiatics compete, will regard the matter in this light, and the voice of the working man is all powerful in most of the Colonies, and has, therefore, to be taken as finally deciding the question, so long as the right of Colonies to complete self-government is recognised, as it must be, in the present day, as a fundamental principle. If, therefore, the Colonies set their backs up against the admission of Asiatics, it is certainly difficult to see how the Home

Colony is usually a source of consideral le

There has been no little feeling evoked

Government can say them "Nny."

Asiatics from that Colony and the course adopted is considered to be a special grievance in respect to natives of India, who are British subjects. It seems to be overlooked that a precisely similar measure was long ago passed in the Cape Colony and is the law there at the present time. There is, therefore, nothing special in the action of the Transvaal, and much more has been made of the matter than it really deserves. It is only one instance among many that have occurred of the assertion of inherent dislike which is felt in most Colonies against persons of Asiatic birth settling down amongst them. This question is different in many respects from that of having Asiatics indentured to perform special work and under special conditions, which, though a great deal has been said against it, without in reality much reason, is on the whole the best and the most logical way in which such persons can be admitted. So long as there is a real demand for Chinese labour at the Rand mines it would manifestly be absurd to prohibit it under such restriction as may reasonably be imposed. It is, however, a different thing to admit Asiatics into the Colonies to settle down and become an integral part of them, and it is to this that the Colonies very strongly object. The position of the Home Government in regard to the question is thus a difficult one. It is, no doubt, a departure from recognised principles that any British subjects -as the people in India are—should be excluded from any British Colony merely upon the ground of their colour. This is the form in which the matter is usually put, but it is not a true statement of the case; and derives much of its force from being in the nature of 'catchword." In one sense it is true; but in another very misleading. If the Indian were as much fairer as he is darker than Europeans he would be equally objected to if he lived in the same way that he does, had the same habits, was in the same degree unsuitable socially, and above all spent so little for food and lodging that he can compete most seriously with Europeans. The Colonies have manifestly the right to at least a full hearing as to whether such persons should be received as fellow citizens, especially as when once they begin to come, they soon augment their numbers to a very considerable extent. The idea of totally excluding them may be considered going too far in the present days of liberalism in respect to international matters; but that their immigration must be regulated to some extent will be conceded by all. The practical question, therefore, resolves itself into what extent exclusive measures may be legitimately adopted—and this can only be left to the decision of each colony cencerned. As time goes on it is likely that the Colonies themselves will take a more liberal view of the subject than can be expected of them while their own white population is comparatively small. The demand for labour must always mode of life does not fit in with that of be large in countries which have to be European Communities. But of course the developed and opened up—and they may chief objection to the Asiatic is that he is a find that the advantages to be obtained severe competitor with Europeans in many from men who can do effective work in this walks of life. He keeps down the price- | direction will in a great degree compensate not of "usance"-but of labour and of for such disadvantages as attach to the trade profits and is consequently as presence of an alien race. In the meantime, unpopular in our Colonies as Shylock was | however, while opinion in the Colonies is | 3, Breach of Municipal Regulations 2, Debt 1, in Venice. Unfortunately in addition to such as it is at the present time, any this objection to him, there is the undeniable attempt to force them to act contrary to their own convictions would be a serious mistake-and might in some instances lead to so much ill-feeling as to threaten a disruption from the central Authority. It will therefore, be wise for the Home Government, who may naturally take a different the Colonies, to deal with due care in this matter and to leave it in the main to the decision of the Colonies themselves.

THE BOYAL HONGKONG YACHT CLUB. The opening scratch fours of the sesson over three-quarter mile course from Yaumati to the Godown Company's wharf were rowed under very favourable conditions, the temperature having made a welcome drop from the previous day; and the wind being from the north-east, the land sheltered the crews contests, but the men, with few exceptions (due to want of practice), were deficient in swing and did not possess a large amount of control over their slides, Mr. F. W. Warre officiated as starter and umpire, and Mr. G. G. Franklin as distance judge.

For the losers, Schwandes and Mc-Gillivray rowed well, and the latter with practice should develop into a good carsman.

Final Heat :--1.- E. W. Carpenter's crew; cox, A. Cruick-

2.-F. A. Biden's crew; cox, H. Broke, This heat produced the best race of the day, the crows being very evenly matched. At the word "Go" both crews got quickly off the mark, and were rowing well when Carpenter's crew. in order to clear a junk, had to alter its course. This forced the boats together, and an immimake representations to the next foul was only averted at the coaling camber (where the crews were level) by Major Broke giving way and steering Biden's crew within inches of the wall. At the torpedo-boat camber Carpenter's crew had secured a quarter-length lead, and rowing 32 to Biden's 30 increased this to a length at the finish.

We are asked to remind members that water polo practice commences to-day, also that fixedseat rowing practice for juniors will be carried on during the summer and autumn, whon races will take place for prizes presented by the rowing captain.

There has been a continued and increased depression in trade in Hongkong and throughout China generally, and in common with nearly every trading and industrial company we have felt this depression and to it we mainly attribute the diminished profits shown. I would also specially mention that we have suffered con: miderable loss through the depreciated value of subsidiary coins, and I estimate that our total loss in 1906 from this cause to be about $15,000, as against $6,000 in 1905. sidering all these oircumstances I think the results of the year's working are not unsatis factory. These local Authorities, as a rule, would seem to be wholly ignorant of the first principles of Imperial finance for they apparently regard their mints chiefly as yet one more means of making money for themselves during their tenure of office, without regard to the dislocation of trade and the evil effects generally which may result from flooding their districts

This has been demonstrated in a very marked manner by the action of the Authorities in the Provinces of the Two Kwang during the past few years by their excessive coining, chiefly of silver 20 and 10 cent and copper one cent pieces. They further issued notes of $1.00 and $5.00 donomination. The former has from the first been "watered as the notes, though bearing on the face the characters (one dollar and an impression of the Kwang Tung dollar are stamped on the back as being redeemable in subsidiary coins which at the present market value means a discount of about 9 per cent, at times this discount has been lower

I would further beg to point out for the consideration of His Excellency that under the terms of the British Commercial Treaty of 1902 (Clause II) China entered into a specific understanding that she should take the necessary steps to provide a national uniform coinage for the whole Empire. Not only was Great Britain the first Treaty Power to secure such an undertaking from China, but even up to the present date many of Messrs. F. MAITLAND and W. H. A Peking message to the Osalia Jiji states that recently the Chinese Government demanded from the Japanese Government that the Senkinsai colliery-on the Fuchun mine claim -and Bimeisan and one or two other adjoining collieries-on the Yental mine claim-should be restored to the Chinese authorities. The Chinese Government maintained that the Senkinsan colliery was the property of a Chinese named Wang, and was quite independent of the Fuchun colliery worked by the Russians. INDO-CHINESE DISCOVERIES.

The Allahabad Pioneer publishes an account of further important archmological discoveries made by Dr. M. A. Stein, in Chinese Turkestan. Dr. Stein's present explorations promise to secure results fully as important and interesting as those obtained previously. In the ancient village sites in the desert north of Niya abandoned in the latter Lalf of the third century Dr. Stein obtained rich yields of antiquarian spoil illustrating everyday life seventeen centuries ago, and showing the predominant influence of Graeco-Buddhist arts as developed on the Indus. He also obtained many valuable records written on wooden tablets in the Kharosthi script peculiar fo the extreme North West of India. In December Dr. Stein carried out his long planned expedition to the aucient site discovered by Seven Hedin in 1900 during his journey through the desert north of Lobnor. Here he obtained large quantities of written records on wood and paper. Most are in Chinese and still await detailed examination, but a considerable number are Kharosthi documents. They indicate the wide extension of this early Indian language. No less striking is the agreement between the constructive features of the houses and the shrines, wood carvings and objects of industrial art discovered at Lobnor and those of the Niya site. It was, however. at Miran on his return journey from Lobnor that Dr. Stein made his most remarkable discoveries. The complete clearing of the ruined fort brought the number of Tibetan records found in its rubbish heaps to the total of close on one thousand. There can be no doubt that the stronghold was intended to guard the direct route to Schachou which also at the present day passes below the fort walls. But of far wider interest a d importance are the art remains which emerged from the debris mounds of Buddhist chrines. These must have been in ruins for four or five conturies before the Tibetan occupation. In one of them there came to light colossal stuces relieves showing the closest relation to Graeco-Buddhist roulpture of the first centuries of the Christian ers. The influence of classical art is reflected with surprising directness in the fine fresoces which cover what remains of the walls of two circular temples enclosing the stupes. The main paintings, which illustrate scenes of Buddhist legend or worship, are remarkable for elever adaptation of classical forms, Indian subjects and ideas. But even more curious are figures represented in elaborate freeco dados. They are so thoroughly western in conception and treatment that they would seem more in place on the walls of a Roman villa than in Buddhist sanctuaries on the very confines of China, One cycle of youthful figures in gracefully designed decorative setting represents the veried joys of life, a strong contrast to the desolation which now reigns in the desert around the ruins and in fact through almost the whole of this region. The Kharoshthi inscriptions painted by the side of the frescoon and pieces of silk bearing legends in the same script indicate the third century A. D. as the approximate period when these shrines

NEBULAR THAT MAY NOT BE PORMING WORLDS-A REMARKABLE ANTICTCLONE ROAD-MAKING NOVELTY-ANOTHER BU-GINNING OF LIFE-OUR HEART BRATE-A WORKSHOP FURNACE -- METAL EMANATION -EAR MASSAGE-COPPER CORR.

The mystery of the spiral nebulae of the sky is further from solution than is sometimes supposed. Prof T. J. J. See rejects the theory that they are true nebulae condensing into systems of worlds or stars as no proof exists that they are gaseous nebulae at all, while it is by no means certain that nebulae form stars. The outline of the spirals suggests repulsion rather than condensation, this view being in harmony with recent investigations radioactive and other repulsive forces. circularity of the planetary orbits makes it absurd to assume that the Solar System ever formed part of a spiral nebula. At present we must admit that the nature of the spiral nebulae is quite unknown, and while we cannot be sure that nebulae develop into stars, we may justly hold that the stars are the outgrowth of gravitational. densation of matter which was once dark.

The promising elastic road now being tested at Zürich consists of a thick rolled layer of fine tarred gravel. The grains, about a twelfth of an inch in size, were coated with tar in a revolving drum, and then hardened for two

The problem of life's origin continues to be attacked patiently and persistently, and we cannot fail to find something of interest in such work as that of Dr. H. C. Bestian, F.R.S., who now, after more than thirty years of invertigation, has produced living organisms from what he believes to have been lifeless chemicals. After being heated and hermetically sealed in tubes, various saline solutions containing ammoniacal salts were again heated, in a calcium chloride bath, to temperature ranging from 239 deg. to 266 deg. Fahr. According to accepted. theories, the tubes should have been absolutely sterile, and every trace of life should have been destroyed. The tubes were then exposed to diffused daylight or placed in an incubator for five weeks to four months. When opened, all contained one or more kinds of micro-organisms, but control tubes, which had been exposed only offering at $28 for old and $18 for new shares; a few hours, showed no traces of such organisms. Vibratory massage is applied to the treatment of catarrhal desiness by means of a new apparatus resembling the earpiece of a telephone receiver, and quite surprising results are claim-For good hearing it is necessary that vibrations be transmitted freely from the eardrum through a chain of little bones or ossicles. In catarrhal desiness the bones are stiffened by mucus, and the new apparatus transmits the vibrations in spite of the stiffening, both giving present hearing and tending to restore normal action. THE SHANSI STUDENTS.

The departure by the N.-D. L. S. Bayers on May 18th of the twenty-five students from Shansi, who go to England to study how the rich mineral resources of their native province may be developed, is a reminder that thirty years have passed since the far-sighted Yung Wing took the first batch of a hundred Chinese boys to study in America. Of those lade, and others who succeeded them, many are now holding high and responsible official appointments, and their influence is being felt in every department of State affairs. Not all, naturally have turned out successes, but it is noteworthy that the small and carefully picked bodies which led the way in foreign study have produced few real failures. Subsequently, when it became a fashionable crase rather than a serious effort, to rush over to Japan for a few months, the effects of the so called study were frequently unfortunate. Among students advanced ideas have ever been popular; the world moves too slowly as a rule for their active young brains, and much that is rash and regrettable, as well as much that is noble and lasting, has been accomplished by the undergraduates of all times and nations. The 10,000 students in Japan have been held accountable for a good deal of mischief, which is not really attributable to them, but it cannot be denied that the ideas 23rd, when the barometric reading was 31.58 they have brought back have frequently been destructive rather than constructive. Nothingof that sort is likely to be imbibed be the twentyave from Shansi who have gone to England some stations. The highest reading on record with a very definite line of study marked out STREET, at present occupied by Messrs. at ony place is 31.72 inches, which occurred at for them. GILBERT'S ROYAL LIQUEUR FIRST QUARTERLY REPORT.

JOHN CLARK, Ph. D.F.C.S., F.I.C.,

Public Analyst for the City of Glasgow and the Counties of Lanark and Renfrew, &c. Reports:—

66 T have made a minute and careful chemical analysis of a fair sample of several hundred casks of Gilbert's Diamond Brand Royal Liqueur Blend of Scotch Whister taken by myself from the bonded stores in which the cashs are lying, and the rosalts of my analysis indicate that it is pure whisky, which has been matured for a considerable period in Sherry Casks, and from its mild and agreeable flavour, I am of opinion that it is a very fine blend of Scotch Whisky:"
